A 2-year-old has changed me forever

I've said it a million times - "My kids are driving me crazy!" - and with good reason of course. Emma is 3 years old and is constantly into everything. In the last month alone she has broken a lens to a very expensive camera, bit a hole in my lap top power cord and rolled toilet paper all over her bedroom and bathroom. She also used two boxes of chocolate pudding like it was confetti and she was in Times Square on New Year's Eve. But actually she was in my laundry room dousing two baskets full of clean and folded clothes with a fine and thorough chocolatey powder coating. Aubrey is 5 and thinks she is The Queen. I have to tell her to do anything and everything at least six times. She is the definition of strong-willed; I have read the book "The Strong Willed Child," by Dr. James Dobson so many times I can quote every page from memory. Aubrey doesn't fit any mold, and I am constantly struggling to find the best way to parent, discipline and reward her. Sadie is only 14 months old but she is full of challenges as well. Her favorite pastimes include smudging her sticky little fingers all over my windows, decorating my house with all of my tupperware, and trying to grab knives out of the dishwasher while I'm loading it. Sadie also loves water - as long as it's in the toilet and especially after one of her sister's has used it, and forgotten to flush. My Mom raised me with a sense of humor, so I do my very best everyday to look on the bright side, to laugh when I can and to realize that these moments will fade all too quickly from my memory. But this week I met someone online who changed me forever. I met Layla Grace Marsh, a 2-year-old in Texas who has stage four high-risk neuroblastoma, and for the last 10 months, Layla's parents have been watching her die. Layla's mother, Shanna, writes on her blog, www.laylagrace.org, about how quiet her house is while her baby sleeps most of the day, only able to wake up for 45 minutes at a time before needing to sleep again, and states with great emotion, "The house is quiet. I am able to go through the motions of laundry, dishes, cooking and picking up without interruptions. But I want interruptions. I want Layla to be under my feet asking for cookies. I want to hear her playing with her toys. I want to take 45 minutes to unload the dishwasher because she keeps trying to help. For every time I uttered the words "I just can't get anything done with these kids under my feet all day" I am eternally regretful. Layla's father writes about the agonizing pain of watching his child suffer, "It's the most difficult thing we've had to cope with through this whole fight. Layla is literally dying before our eyes but not like how it works in the movies." Since I've learned about Layla, I've gone to sleep praying for her and woken up in the morning thinking of her. I cried as I washed my windows this week, so grateful and thankful that my children are healthy enough to make messes. Because of Layla Grace, my attitude has changed. I rocked my baby to sleep just to savor a few more minutes of her sweet smelling baby skin, and watched her eyes grow heavy with sleep, instead of putting her in her bed to doze off alone. Clean or dirty, crazy or peaceful - these are the moments I want to remember for the rest of my life. These moments are mine; they are precious and I thank God for them. Ashley Cook and Clay White, seniors at Wando High School, will join other musicians from across the nation March 4-6 as part of Music for All's 2010 Honor Band of America. Cook and White were selected from hundreds of applicants from across the country for membership in this prestigious honors ensemble. Clay is the son of Eddie and Laurie White. Ashley is the daughter of Creighton and Kathy Cook. Their band director is Scott Rush. The Honor Band of America will perform in concert at 8 p.m., Saturday, March 6, at Clowes Memorial Hall located on the campus of Butler University in Indianapolis, Indiana. The Honor Band of America is a national ensemble that will be conducted in 2010 by H. Robert Reynolds, principal conductor of the University of Southern California Thornton Wind Ensemble and retired long-time Director of Bands at University of Michigan.

Ticket information is available by calling 800-848-BAND (2263) or at www.musicforall.org. The Honor Band of America will perform Weiner Philharmonic Fanfare by Richard Strauss, Short Ride in a Fast Machine by John Adams/Odom, The Logic of All My Dreams from "Alchemy in Silent Spaces" by Steven Bryant, Slalom by Carter Pann, O Magnum Mysterium by Morten Lauridsen/Reynolds, and Suite from "Mass" by Leonard Bernstein. Clay and Ashley play the trumpet and oboe, respectively, in Wando's Symphonic Band. They are also both section leaders in Wando's nationally-ranked marching band. The Wando Marching Band has won the AAAAAA division of the state marching competition for the past five years. Clay was selected to be one of the lead trumpet players in the All-state Jazz Band last year. Ashley is the principal oboist of the Youth Orchestra of the Lowcountry.

Winning ice cream flavor will be chosen by fans and players

The Family Circle Cup has partnered with Wholly Cow Ice Cream, a premium ice cream manufacturer based in Charleston to launch the "Family Circle Cup & Wholly Cow Ice Cream Create-A-Flavor Contest". The contest allows the public to submit personally-designed ice cream flavors for consideration via the tournament's official Web site at FamilyCircleCup.com. The top three entries will receive prizes including tickets to the tournament, with the winner performing an on-court pre-match coin toss in Family Circle Stadium. Family Circle Cup fans and players will judge submissions, with player votes constituting a large portion of the winning decision. The Family Circle Cup, a Sony Ericsson WTA Tour Premier Event, is scheduled April 10-18 at the Family Circle Tennis Center. Fans 21 and older can place their submissions at www.FamilyCircleCup.com, with each recipe including a flavor name, base flavor of ice cream and up to two additional ingredients (i.e. "Banarama" - banana ice cream with chocolate chips and marshmallows). Specific ingredient proportions or assembly instructions are not required. Multiple entries per person will be accepted. Complete rules and regulations are available at www.FamilyCircleCup.com. Submissions will be accepted through midnight on Friday, March 12. There will be two rounds of judging. First Round: On March 15, Wholly Cow Ice Cream will review the submitted flavors and a panel of judges will select the top three finalists based on the look (10 percent) and taste (90 percent). The three finalists will be notified on March 31, and given two tickets to the Family Circle Cup matches at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, April 13. Second Round: Wholly Cow will offer the three finalists' flavors as free samples on-site at the Wholly Cow Ice Cream booth at the Family Circle Cup from April 10-12, where fans and players will vote on their favorite flavor. The grand prize winner will be announced on stadium court prior to the Tuesday night match on April 13, and the winning flavor will be sold by Wholly Cow Ice Cream for the duration of the tournament. The grand prize winner will have the opportunity to toss the coin prior to the Tuesday night match on April 13, following the winners announcement, and will receive one pint of their ice cream creation.
